NFT MARKETPLACE ARTCHIVE WORKS WITH NEW YORK-BASED PHOTOGRAPHER JOHNNY ROZSA

The red carpet of NFTs will be collaborating with the world-renowned artist to sell some of his most iconic photographs as NFTs.

NEW YORK, NY – DEC. 10, 2021 – Upcoming NFT platform ARTCHIVE announces its team up with fashion and celebrity photographer Johnny Rozsa. The marketplace will bring some of his most iconic works to the metaverse, where collectors will have the opportunity to own one of his many images. ARTCHIVE will ensure that 1 to 1 NFTs will be sold, creating authenticity and exclusiveness within their platform.

With a number of original pieces in museums around the world, as well as being featured in Vogue, i-D, New York Times, PEOPLE and more, Rozsa has famously photographed household names like Tina Turner, Hugh Grant, Halle Berry, Nicholas Cage, Sade and many others.

Partnering with world-renowned photographers like Rozsa represents ARTCHIVE's mission to connect the art world with the digital, merging fine art into the metaverse and allowing everyone to own original pieces of art at their fingertips.

ABOUT ARTCHIVE

The red carpet of NFTs, ARTCHIVE provides a platform for NFT-powered fine arts and photography designed for the community on the Solana blockchain. Through collaborations with established and influential artists and partners, ARTCHIVE brings forth a secured, user-friendly NFT marketplace, scalable blockchain and a paired native token (ARTC). The ARTCHIVE mission is to ignite a creator-centric platform that leverages blockchain in a powerful way.
